ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Mark Hanna has nominated his President. He has rendered on the matter of the platform, but he is determined to have at least a test of the strength on the vice presidency. The straight-out gold men, flushed with their victory over Mr. McKinley's manager by compelling him to accept an honest and unequivocal declaration for the "gold standard," are determined to nominate Governor Morton, of New York. It was explained in last night's dispatches that Mr. Hanna would present Mr. Morton's nomination. To-day he has gone one step further. He has given orders to fight the nomination; to both Hobart and Evans the word has been sent to put forth every effort. Hobart is Mr. Hanna's choice for expediency, because he represents New Jersey. Evans is his personal preference because he is a strong man in the whole South. Of one thing there is no doubt: Clay Evans may not be nominated for the vice presidency, but he will live in Washington as a Cabinet officer for four years after McKinley takes his seat in the White House. Mr. Hobart's boom is a limping thing, that scarcely deserves the name. Its only hope is in the hands of the friends of Mr. McKinley will support him. On all sides there is harmony. Mr. Lodge, in the committee on resolutions, withdrew from the candidacy for the chairmanship of the committee; he withdrew although Mr. Foraker is known to be opposed to the "gold" standard. Mr. Foraker placed in nomination the name of Mr. De- bols, but his action was purely spectacular. Mr. Foraker was, of course, elected, and he immediately named a subcommittee to draw the financial plank of the platform, which consists entirely of men pledged to the currency question. OPINION OF ATTORNEY HAYS'S SPEECH TO THE NEWPORT JURY.

Affecting Scene, During Which Mrs. Walling Broke Down and Retired from the Court Room.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

NEWPORT, Ky., June 16.—An unusually large crowd gathered along Alonzo Walling's beaten path between the jail and court room this morning to see the prisoner brought over. When Silas P. Hays, the Greenback attorney, began his argument the court room was well filled, one hundred women being present. Mr. Hays, who is aiding the commonwealth, is more especially the personal attorney of the Bryan family. He spoke during the greater part of the day, and during the afternoon created a decided sensation. This was the breaking down of Mrs. Charles Walling and her husband, Mr. Hays, who was crying bitterly. It was at a point where Mr. Hays was telling of Jackson and Walling in the fly cell in the Cincinnati City Hall, and where Jackson had said, "Wally, you have played your part well. And then they both had laughed. Mr. Hays said it was like the laugh of the fiends in hell. Mr. Walling had been much affected at the attorney's terrible denunciations, and at that expression she began to weep. Mr. and Mrs. Clint Walling were both weeping. Mrs. Bryan was weeping, and the large assembly was deeply moved. Mr. Hays caught up the situation and told of the sorrow and shame brought upon all concerned—upon the people of the dead girl and upon his own mother and sisters and brothers, and upon a community.

At another time he said the defense would seek with all the force and ability at its command to establish its case. He said the minds of the jury that Pearl met her death near Fort Thomas. They would admit that case, but would seek solely to raise what he called a reasonable doubt in regard to his connection with her killing on Kentucky soil.

Asked if he would speak, Col. Nelson said: "No, Col. Nelson said nothing to me about it. And of course it is his place to do so. If he does not, I will do so. The Hoosier lawyer was congratulated on all sides on his argument. Col. Walling began his argument in behalf of Walling late in the afternoon and will continue to-morrow. The case may reach the jury to-morrow night.

A "BUSINESS SESSION."

The first session of the convention was marked by a pleasing determination, manifested again and again, by the delegates that this is a business session. There was little time wasted on meaningless "orations." The leaders showed by their manner that they proposed to waste no time on such frothy nonsense. Mr. Platt, coming in after a number of his New York delegates had taken their seats, was applauded by them. Senator Quay, arriving some fifteen minutes after Chamberlain, Hastings and the other Pennsylvanians had entered, was cheered lustily by his friends in the delegation. In each case the people in the gallery took up the applause and kept it up for a moment or two. Chauncey Depew timed himself carefully. He entered at twenty minutes after 12 and then took care to walk down the wrong aisle, so there would be some commotion to note his advent. He succeeded. As soon as the applause had died away Chairman Carter rapped three times with his historic gavel and the convention got ready for business. This is as should be. There is altogether too much time wasted at most of the conventions in the cheap clap-trap of "orations." It is all false and artificial, and simply consumes time that should be better occupied. Mark Hanna, the Warwick of the moment, came in without hand or a

FINANCIAL PLANK SETTLED

INTEREST NOW CENTERED IN THE VICE PRESIDENCY QUESTION.

Message Received by Mr. Depew Stating that Governor Morton Had Not Changed His Mind.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—There is interest tonight only in the impending battle for the vice presidency. Mr. Hanna's concession to the straight-out gold men this morning has ceased to be discussed. The history of Evans, which led up to his final surrender, is not unfamiliar. It was stated in these dispatches last night how Mr. Hanna yesterday passed from despair to defiance. Yesterday evening as the reports from his lieutenants came in Mr. Hanna believed that he would still be able to control the situation, the more so because it was true beyond a doubt that there were some grievous errors in the estimate of gold strength in the committee. Brought up by a combination of actual errors in the Lodge calculations and by the reports of over-optimistic agents, Mr. Hanna, as stated last night, completely changed front, and by midnight sent Mr. Lodge an ultimatum of what he would accept. It was the plank reaffirming the party's adherence to a currency "as good as gold." This morning Mr. Hanna for some time maintained the same defiant attitude. Then came to him more accurate reports of his own strength, or, rather, weakness, and soon after that there was a conference between him and Mr. Lodge. True to his policy of harmony and haste, Mr. Hanna stuck to his determination not to carry the fight into the committee. He announced, however, that Mr. McKinley must insist on coming the chairman of the committee. To this Mr. Lodge readily assented, and, as stated above, he himself placed Mr. Foraker in nomination.

What exact shape the financial plank will finally assume is at this moment difficult to say. Nor is it indeed material. It will declare in plain words that the "gold standard" is the basis of the whole contentment. It will be adopted in the convention, probably to-morrow afternoon. The free-silver men will be given opportunity to declare their position, and then Messrs. Teller and Dubois and such following as they have, will walk out if they will. Now that the word "gold" has been inserted it is expected that the Teller bolt may assume somewhat larger proportions than was anticipated when Mr. Hanna still thought he could control the convention to omit the word. With this the currency question practically passes out of the situation. Intensity of bitterness, its place is promptly taken by the vice-presidential fight. In this matter Mr. Hanna has not receded from the stand he took yesterday of unalterable opposition to Mr. Morton. He has bent to the gold current. He will be broken by the Morton stream, but this time he will not bend.

Mr. Hanna has called upon the McKinley men in every delegation to rally to the anti-Morton standard. Even the New York men have been told that in this way they must choose between McKinley and Morton. The McKinley men in that delegation have wavered in their loyalty to the Canton candidate and have immediately entered upon a vast vindictive fight upon their own Governor. Thus they are tonight circulating the following appeal from a number of clergymen of New York to the colored delegates:—

"Colored Delegates—Can you afford to support for Vice President a man who, while occupying that office, resigned his place as presiding officer to a Democrat when the Lodge election bill came up before the United States Senate? No, of course not. Then you cannot entertain the idea for a moment of giving the second place on the ticket to Levi P. Morton, of New York. The Lodge election bill, had it become a law, would have given two millions of colored Republicans in the South the right of franchise conferred by the Constitution, but with the aid of the treachery of dough-faced leadership of such Republicans as Thomas C. Platt's candidate for Vice President."

This precious epistle is signed by six clergymen, who are a committee representing the metropolitan district of associated churches in New York, representing four thousand church-going Republicans in New York.

Among the Western men Mr. Morton's standing as a banker and his close connection with the moneyed powers of Wall street is being urged, and in a word the McKinley men are stooping at no campaigning device to secure his defeat. Mr. Hanna in this matter shows himself in a role that is entirely new since he has been in St. Louis. He manifests a bitterness against Mr. Morton which is at curious variance from his former anxiety to have him share the ticket with Mr. McKinley. It is not difficult to recognize that his resentment is due entirely to the fact that Mr. Morton's candidacy is being led by the forces which defeated the wishes of Major McKinley on the currency question. Meanwhile the Hobart boom is being pushed. With how much success, Mr. Hanna himself cannot assert. The McKinley strength is divided between Evans and Hobart, and it is not easy to persuade Mr. Evans to withdraw in Mr. Hobart's favor. In view of the fact that the Tennesseean knows he is the strongest man in the room, to cap the climax all of Mr. Hanna's troubles to-night, mutiny has broken out in his own household. Mr. Foraker has declared for Morton for Vice President in defiance of Mr. Hanna, and twenty-three delegates have joined the revolt.

This interchange of messages passed between Messrs. Platt and Mr. Hanna tonight. Mr. Hanna sent word to Mr. Platt that he would fight Morton to the last. "They have written Wall street across the face of the platform," he said. "He shall not write his endorsement on it, too." To which Mr. Platt replied: "Well, Hanna, I forced gold down his throat and that I'll force Morton, too." To this Hanna replied: "Tell Mr. Platt I'll sell my last coat to stay here and fight it out." FAVORABLE TO MORTON.

Indiana Delegates Want Morton Nominated for Vice President.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—The Indiana delegation, in common with the representatives of most of the other States, have had a very easy and almost listless time of it to-day. The situation is such that there is little need for delegations remaining about headquarters, and the result has been that the members of the delegation have been visiting the tornado district and strolling about the city. In Indiana chief interest centers in the probable action of the delegation on the divided report of the committee on resolutions. It is conceded that there will be two possible declarations of policy, employing the word "gold" in the platform and the minority taking a less emphatic method of expressing their position on the money question. There is no doubt that the gold sentiment has developed strongly in the Hoosier delegation since its action of Monday regarding the appointment of General Wallace as the president of the convention on platform, and it is measurably certain that a decided majority of the delegation, perhaps all of it, will favor the majority report. There are two or three members who are of the opinion that it is unnecessary to be any more emphatic than the declaration in the amended Indiana plank, declaring for the maintenance of the present standard and eliminating the reference to the list-to-1 ratio, but the opinion has steadily gained ground that a bold and unequivocal stand is preferable to one which might in any quarter be regarded in the slightest degree ambiguous. Many of the delegates were in receipt today of telegrams from their constituents urging an adherence to the gold idea, this being particularly true of General Wallace, whose position has been so bravely taken, and it has become so generally known.

This afternoon the Hoosiers had a direct intimation from New York that Mr. Morton's name would be put in the platform, and he presented as a candidate for the vice presidency. Mr. Platt said to the secretary of the Indiana delegation that in case New York decided to present the name of Morton as the candidate for the vice presidential nomination, New York would esteem it a compliment if Indiana would join forces with them, and this has been construed as amounting to a declaration that they would urge his claims. A canvass of the Indiana delegates discloses the fact that they are almost unanimously favorable to his nomination. A few of them had been inclined to vote for H. Clay Evans, of Tennessee, and there are two or three who favored other candidates, but they report in the field it is more than probable that he would receive a handsome majority of Indiana's vote. There was originally a decided sentiment that Mr. Reed was the most available man for the place, but Mr. Reed's friends have been so sympathetic that under no circumstances would they support the nomination. Mr. Manly, indeed, having gone so far as to say that even should the nomination be made by acclamation and the convention adjourn, Mr. Reed would positively decline to serve, that is has been agreed that this is entirely out of the question. A LIVELY FIGHT.

New York State Delegation at War Over Governor Morton.

Associated Press Dispatch.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Despite the general feeling that the ticket will be McKinley and Morton, Governor Morton's name will not go on the ticket without the most vehement protest of the anti-Platt faction in New York State. Headed by Warner Miller, the leaders of the latter are bending their energies to prevent Morton's nomination for Vice President. The breach in the New York delegation between the Platt and Miller factions was intensified today when a telegram from Morton to Platt was received, signifying his acceptance of the vice-presidential standard if he failed in the presidential race.

"Levi P. Morton cannot go on the ticket with William McKinley," said Warner Miller, the leader of the anti-Platt faction, to-night. "We will invoke the aid of the McKinley managers to assist us, their friends in New York State, against this injecting of national politics into our State fight," and his followers added their "yes" to the statement.

It was nearly 11 o'clock last afternoon when the men in the Miller camp heard from good authority that Mr. Platt had received Mr. Morton's consent to use his name for the second place. At 6 o'clock they had gathered in their forces to consult over the matter, and in a short time Mr. Morton's name was projected. By 7 o'clock a petition was finding its way through the New York delegation, reading: "In the interest of the Republican party, we, delegates from the State of New York to the national Republican convention, protest against dragging the party struggle in our own State into the national canvass, and record ourselves as unalterably opposed to placing any of our fellow-citizens upon the ticket as the candidate for Vice President."

When the McKinley League from the State of New York met T. C. Campbell, of New York, presented the following resolution: "The McKinley League of the State of New York, the custodian at St. Louis of the signatures of 167,000 Republicans of the Empire State who desire the nomination of William McKinley for President of the United States, having heard that it is the intention of the bosses' combine, working in conjunction with certain treacherous friends of McKinley, to force Levi P. Morton on the Republican national ticket as a candidate for Vice President, does hereby protest against such conspiracy for these reasons:—

"First—That its purpose is to discredit the candidacy of William McKinley and to weaken it before the people.

"Second—That it is an insult to the friends of Major McKinley in New York State, who have been the victims of the attacks of Governor Morton's manager on McKinley has compelled them to oppose the presidential ambition of Governor Morton.

"Third—That it constitutes a menace to the Republicanism of the Nation in that it

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—There is more cause for uneasiness in the McKinley headquarters than the Morton boom for the vice presidency. Since they have been defeated on gold in the platform the McKinley managers have been starting at everything which looms in sight. The latest scare for the McKinley people is the report that a combination is to be formed of the Allison, Quay and Morton forces to vote for Reed on the first ballot. If they do this it will be necessary, of course, for the candidates named to withdraw. Mr. Platt adds to the anxiety at the McKinley rooms by a determination to support the Morton presidential boom. He points out what every one, including Mr. Hanna, recognized this morning, that in the convention this morning the main portions of Mr. Fairbanks's speech which treated of the tariff fell on unresponsive ears, while the currency discussion aroused the only interest of the day. Therefore, he says, since the currency is the issue, and not the tariff, Mr. Morton is the logical candidate, a fact which, he says, is made incontrovertible by Mr. Hanna's surrender on the platform, which is now a Morton platform.

The anti-McKinley leaders have been receiving every hint from Indianapolis that the revolt against Mr. Hanna is extensively spreading. If the ballot on Mr. McKinley can be delayed, they feel confident they can ultimately defeat him. They claim to have the names of three hundred delegates now who will vote for Mr. Reed on the first ballot. Mr. McKinley if the nomination can be kept away from him on the first ballot. Mr. Hanna has known for days past the fatal danger that delay means to him. If he has the power this convention will learn something of the power of a determined presiding officer like Mr. Thurston. Reed's plan, if such exists, will soon develop itself. The paraders in the streets and the shouters in the hotels are all Reed men. Never a word is heard of Mr. McKinley, and this aspect of the extraordinary convention. It would surprise no one if a dark horse was taken up by the Reed-Allison-Quay and Morton men. The thing is possible.

It is significant of the return of confidence among the anti-McKinley leaders that a telegram has been received from Mr. Morton to-night announcing his firm determination to stay in the presidential fight and that he is not a vice-presidential candidate. Twelve hours ago Mr. Hanna would have hailed the telegram with delight, because he felt sure of defeating Mr. Morton as a presidential possibility. To-night it only adds to his anxiety. Another source of anxiety to him comes from the committee on credentials. Mr. Hanna's programme proposed smooth sailing for the committee's report in the convention. Mr. Addicks and his delegation were to be favorably recommended by the committee, and no opposition was to be made. Now the committee has reported in favor of Higgins, which may mean hours of debate. In every way Mr. Hanna's road to-morrow will be rocky. L. G.

WALLACE IS POPULAR.

His Bold Stand for Gold Has Added to His Fame.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—Gen. Lew Wallace has become one of the shining lights of the convention, not only on account of his fame in fields other than political, but on account of his bold and firm statement of the insincerity of the word "gold" in the platform. He was further honored by the resolutions committee at its meeting in the afternoon, the committee insisting that he act as its secretary. His leadership in the gold fight and the numerous telegrams he receives every hour from Indiana, commending his course remind one much of the story of Columbus and the egg. It seems singular, with all these clamors for gold, that the money plank in the Republican State platform was not made to read that way. But the delegates were more impressed at that time in discussing instructions or no instructions, and striving for their favorites in the spirited gubernatorial race.

This evening General Wallace received a well-signed telegram from Indianapolis, and he commented on the apposite wording of it. The telegram is as follows:—

"Stand firm for gold standard and insist that wage earners and farmers of America shall receive for their work and products as good a dollar as European bondholders receive for their bonds."

This was signed by Daniel Stewart & Co., Hendrickson, Lefler & Co., Hendricks & Cooper, Pearson & Wetzel, W. H. Grimes, Murphy, Hibben & Co., Kipp, Ross, Ed Lilly & Co., D. P. Erwin & Co., Henry W. Bennett, Holberg & Reese, Layman, Camp
